Litter Overall:

This schnoodle litter was put together with two puppies from other litters because of their small number so they could be raised in a social group. They are confident and self-assured, They are socially appropriate with one another, with other dogs and with cats. They showed little to no stress in new situations, around new people or the circumstances that would typically be considered stress. They are curious and investigative with new sights and sounds. They all have a good focus memory and problem-solving abilities. They have good motivation. They are socially appropriate and their interactions with people. They are rarely vocal. They have good bite inhibition and rarely use their mouth. They are comfortable and tolerant of handling and restraint and genuinely enjoy the interaction. They have no red flags and show no possessiveness. These puppies are very consistent.
