Individual Notes:

Carrera Orange overall is a little timid to start. He will adjust very well on his own. He is also a bit immature, but this does not affect the results of this test. He does show some stress in new situations, around new people and circumstances typically considered stressful. He does react appropriately to new sites and sounds, including those that should be considered startling. Orange is curious and investigative. He has a good memory, focus, and problem-solving abilities average to his age and stage of development. He has good motivations for interaction, food and toys at fairly equal and balance levels. Orange is socially appropriate in his interactions with one another, other dogs, and with cats, he is also socially appropriate in his interactions with people. He is rarely vocal and has excellent bite inhibition, if he uses his mouth to initiate or engage and play. Orange has no red flags and show no possessiveness. He has mid-level energy. Overall the Carrera litter is fairly consistent with very few differences between individuals. They are curious, social, personable, and affectionate. They are content to explore and play on their own, while still being engaging. These puppies are well balanced, and should adapt well into most any home, as long as not overwhelmed they do need time to adjust to new situations
