Litter Overall:

The Maggie litter over all is confident and self-assured, although they needed a minute to adjust in new situations. They did adjust very well and quickly. They are appropriately social with on another and with other dogs. They showed little to no stress in new situations, around new people, and in circumstances that would typically be considered stressful. They react appropriately to new sights and sounds and recover from things that are startling rather quickly. They have good motivations for food, toys, and interaction. They also have a good memory and problem-solving abilities. Their focus was a bit scattered but appropriate for their age. This litter is appropriate in their interactions with people. They vocalized when socially appropriate. They rarely use their mouths, but when they did it was very gentle. They were very comfortable and tolerant of handling and restraint. Over all this litter has no red flags and shows no possessiveness. They were very consistent from puppy to puppy. Differences between puppies are listed below:

Individual Notes:

Maggie Red has mid-level energy. She's very confident and self-assured and happy to explore and play on her own. She is a little more independent when compared to the rest of the litter. She is also personable and enjoys handling and cuddling. She's playful and curious and motivated by toys and food. She would be well-suited in most any home but might be a better fit than her littermates in a home that needs to leave their puppy a bit.

Health notes:

Maggie Red has an umbilical hernia.
